

2. At the celebration of Soviet National Day, Nov. 7, in Burma, the Soviets invited everyone in the British Embassy in Burma down to the last Third Secretary, including the representatives of the British Council. This appears to be in line with the current Russian attempt to drive a wedge between Great Britain and the United States by implying that the British are more friendly to the Russians than is the United States. It is estimated that the number was around twenty, in contrast to the seven who were invited from the American Embassy.
